

Andrea Molberg, PhD Consulting Psychologist

Doubly trained at the University of Minnesota as both an organizational and counseling psychologist, Dr. Andrea Molberg has spent her career helping people get along and organizations be more effective. As consultant, trainer, and coach she has worked with Fortune 500 companies, world-class health organizations, non-profits, governmental agencies, and educational institutions for over 35 years. Her executive coaching clients include physicians, executives, HR leaders, and entrepreneurs.

Andrea has served as a senior faculty member of the College of Executive Coaching since 2000. For thirty years, she was an extremely popular part of the UST Center for Business Excellence faculty where she taught thousands how to manage conflict, handle change, influence, and collaborate.

University of St. Thomas students chose her Teacher of the Year in Social Sciences. Her newly released EMERGENCY KIT for FINDING COMMON GROUND: Helping Americans Get Along is an international bestseller. A former Midwesterner, Andrea is now headquartered in Tucson.
